MERCHANTS HAVE SPLENDID OUTING

Last Sunday was a day long to be remembered by the great crowd of residents of Daly City who journeyed to Oak Cove Park for the second annual picnic of the Daly City Merchants' Association. The outing was a grand success, as everyone knows who attended, and the success of the event was not due to any particular person or thing, but to the combined efforts of all who participated. Much credit is due to those who donated whatever they happened to have for the use and benefit of the picnic.

The large majority of the picnickers met at the City Hall at 9 A. M., and, led by the Eagles band, followed by city officials and officials of the Merchants' Association, the large number of automobiles, filled to overflowing, journeyed south to the picnic grounds.

Arriving at the grounds, tables were provided for the picnickers, and soon a program of entertainment for the large crowd was under way.

In the center of the picnic grounds there was a bountiful supply of "hot dogs," ice cream and delicious coffee, made as only the Merchants' celebrated coffee makers know how to make it. This was provided by the Merchants' as an addition to the well-laden baskets which each of the families had brought along to provide for the comfort of the inner man.

During the day the Eagles' band presented a concert which was most thoroughly enjoyed by the large crowd. The members of this popular band are entertainers of the highest order, and deserve a great deal of credit for their efforts in entertaining the Merchants and their guests.

Music for dancing was furnished by Del's accordion band, and the dance platform proved to be one of the best patronized places to be found on the picnic grounds.

During the day's festivities there were races for the boys and girls, the fat men and plump ladies, that were exciting in the extreme, being warmly contested, while the victors were amply rewarded for their efforts, the awards coming from the members of the Merchants' Association.

There was an exciting baseball game, in which some of the members of the rival teams displayed exceptional ability in muffing the ball, while others developed a Babe Ruth complex, one of the home-run lads being unfortunate enough to break the windshield of a nearby automobile.

Horseshoe pitching occupied the attention of a number of the picnickers, a large number of teams being entered. Some excellent scores were made, but when the finals had been completed, H. Prizborowski and J. Mockler were declared the barnyard golf champions.

The thanks of the committee having charge of this successful outing are due to the city officials, and to the members of the police department who led the parade and handled the traffic without delay and with safety.

No doubt the people of this section will look forward with pleasant anticipation to the Daly City Merchants' picnic as an annual event.

CELEBRATES SIXTH BIRTHDAY

Robert John Mullen, formerly of Daly City, celebrated his sixth birthday on Saturday, August 22, at the new home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mullin, of Casa Mateo. The little host's table was beautifully decorated in a color scheme of red and white, with miniature favors especially arranged for the guests. A delicious luncheon was served to the following: Mrs. W. F. Hesselin and children, Ruth and Charles, of Pescadero; Mr. and Mrs. John Hesselin, of Daly City; Mrs. T. C. Thiel and children, Margaret, Evelyn and Teddy Thiel, of Lomita Park; Thelma Jamison and Charles Evans, of Casa Mateo; William Preston, of Villa Park, San Mateo; Mrs. Alice Lyons and daughter Catherine Lyons, of Oklahoma; Ida Preston, of Daly City; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Green, of Daly City; Mr. John Hesselin, Jr., of Daly City. An enjoyable day was spent by all in playing games. Robert was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

POPULAR COUPLE MARRIED

Last Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, in the family home, Miss Rose Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mills, of Galvez street, became the bride of Lawrence S. Jacobsen, of San Francisco. Rev. Turner of the Church of the Good Samaritan performed the ceremony. The bridal couple stood under a large white bell during the ceremony. Miss Drusilla Felsch, of Risel street, was the bridesmaid, and Herbert Jacobsen, brother of the groom, was the best man. After the wedding ceremony a reception was held, fifty guests being in attendance. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Miss Drusilla Felsch caught the bride's bouquet, a beautiful shower bouquet of lillies of the valley and gardenias. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Jacobsen left for a honeymoon tour of Southern California.

LEGION MEMBERS NAME CANDIDATES

Last Friday evening, August 28, the members of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, held their nomination of officers for the coming year, the election to be held at the next meeting. Judging from the number of nominees, the election promises to be an exciting one, and it behooves every member to be present to cast his ballot.

At the conclusion of the meeting, "Doc" and his musicl pals tuned up, and the usual monthly dance was under way, with a number of visitors to help matters along.

The horseshoe pitchers are going into serious training for their contest with the Eagles on Sunday, September 13. Make a note of the date and be on hand at Jefferson Union high school at 1 P. M., for this promises to be a lively contested game, according to reports from the scouts who have witnessed practice games of both teams.

LEGION AUXILIARY SELECTS OFFICERS

The members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, American Legion, held their regular meeting on Friday, August 2:. At this meeting the new officers for the coming year were elected, as follows: Mrs. Jordan, president; Mrs. Kenney, first vice-president; Mrs. Callsen, second vice-president; Mrs. Harrison, treasurer; Mrs. Saunders, secretary; Mrs. Jones, historian; Mrs. Craft, chaplain; Mrs. Moekler, sergeant-at-arms; Mrs. Przbrowski, marshal. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the committee.

SERVICES ARE HELD FOR POISON VICTIMS

Late Wednesday evening of last week little Esther Aline, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Peck, of San Mateo avenue, passed away in South San Francisco hospital. Esther and her sister, Mary Emma, drank the contents of a bottle of lysol while playing at the family home. The younger child passed away almost instantly, but Esther lingered several days before death relieved her suffering.

The funeral took place last Saturday at 1 P. M., from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., with Bishop Vance Pearson officiating. Mrs. Vance Pearson rendered a solo, "Your Sweet Little Rosebud Has Left You." A duet, "Sometime We'll Understand," was sung by Mrs. O. Stowell and Mrs. Vance Pearson. Mrs. George Simister sang "Bring, Heavy Heart, Your Grief to Me." The speakers were Elder Marion O. Roper and Archer Willey.

Through the kindness of Mayor H. H. Smith, the merchants and the different organizations who so kindly contributed, a proper funeral was made possible for the little sisters. Hale Bros.' employees contributed sufficient funds to purchase tickets to Ogden, Utah. Mr. and Mrs. Peck accompanied the bodies to Utah, where they were laid to rest.

NEWLYWEDS ARE TENDERED A MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Evans, newlyweds, of Winchester street, were given a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mr. Evans' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Evans, Thursday evening of last week. They received many lovely and useful gifts. A buffet supper was served at a late hour to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. A. Sadler, Mr. and Mrs. G. Felsch and daughters, Misses Drusilla and June Felsch and son George Felsch, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hansen and daughter, Miss Claire Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. Jewett and son, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Blake, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Evans and daughter Iris Gwendolyne, Misses Sylvia and Norma Evans and William Irwin.

A Triduum will be preached at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, commencing Friday, September 4. The morning services during the Triduum will be at 6, 7:30 and 9 A. M.; evening at 8 P. M. Distinguished preachers will conduct the exercises during the three days, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

NEW COUNTY TAX RATE IS ADOPTED

The new tax rate for San Mateo county for the fiscal year 1931-1932 was fixed by the board of supervisors last Tuesday afternoon at $3.295 for the unincorporated territory and $2.895 for the incorporated districts. This is a reduction of .015 from the tax rate of last year. Included in the new tax rate is a levy of 5 cents for the widening of the La Honda road, which is part of the plan for the construction of the Redwood-to-the-Sea highway, and .021 for the Sunnyvale dirigible base.

With the exception of the 5 cent levy for the La Honda road, the adoption of the new tax rate was unanimous on the part of the board. Supervisors Hickey and Thompson voted against the allowance for the La Honda road, the former demanding that if provision is made for this improvement, a similar amount should be provided in the new rate for the Daly City "Bottleneck." Both Supervisors Hickey and Thompson made the statement that the five cents allowance for the La Honda road would never be taken out of the budget.

The matter of a jail site for the proposed San Francisco jail, which came up at a special meeting of the board of supervisors of this county last Tuesday morning, was postponed by that body until September 21. The San Francisco supervisors are anxious to obtain a permit from the supervisors of this county for the erection of jail on the Sneath ranch, near Millbrae. The final decision in the matter is expected to be taken by the board of supervisors of San Mateo county on September 21.

The only other matter taken by the board other than postponement of the San Francisco jail site was the approval of the sewer assesment in the Colma sewer district, vigorously opposed by County Engineer James S. James. This was unanimously approved by the members of the board.

POPULAR RACERS FOR TANFORAN MEET

Of the popular racers to take part in the coming Tanforan meeting none will have a larger following than the "iron mare," Lady Seth. The flier from Missouri was right at the height of her form at the Spring Meet and since then has led good ones home at other tracks. The "Lady" possesses phenomenal speed and at least sufficient stamina to go a little more than once around the oval.

The Seths are of the durable kind and keep right on winning season after season. They come to hand early, too. Lady Seth stood up under campaigning last year that would have sent many an apparently sound thoroughbred to the farm for a long rest. She faced the barrier no less than fifty-five time in the twelve month period. This year she is doing her share of racing for young "Jim" Parsons, who is bringing her to Tanforan.

Record breakers have a wonderful appeal for race goers and even the neophytes among the fans recall that Adam's grand daughter made two new marks at Tanforan last April, running one mile and seventy yards in the sizzling time of 1:41 and the Club House course in 1:33 3-5.

Owner Parsons has asked for fourteen stalls for the session to open at Tanforan, Friday, November 6.

MERCHANTS SEEK MORE MEMBERS

There was the usual well attended meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association at the City Hall auditorium last Wednesday evening, with Andrew Vireno presiding.

The reports of the various committees on the picnic consumed the most of the evening. A vote of thanks was given to the following named persons and companies for the donations and assistance in making the second annual picnic the greatest ever held by a Daly City organization, and the secretary was instructed to write letters to each of them informing them of the action taken: Mayor H. H. Smith, A. Witt, Market Street Railway Company, Fred Bonner Company, Daly City Theatre, Cut-rate Market, T. C. Rice, county recorder, Eagles' band, William Bolger, Maxwell Coffee Co., Wonder Bread Company, South City Bakery.

Considerable time was spent in discussing the desirablity of changing the meeting place of the association, but no definite decision was reached.

A movement was started to get new members in the newly annexed district of Colma.

Speeches were made by Mayor H. H. Smith, A. Scampini, Councilmen Arthur Dalton and Julius Twesten. Mayor's Smith's address was especially complimentary to the officers of the association.

The next regular meeting will be held on October 7.

HONORED AT DELIGHTFUL SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. N. McNally, of Mission street, was given a delightful surprise birthday party in her home on Wednesday evening of last week by a group of her friends, who took possession of the home and also presented her with many lovely gifts. The color scheme of decoration was carried out in pastel shades of pink, blue and yellow. The evening was spent in playing whist. Delicious refreshments were served to the following guests at an artistically decorated table: Mrs. Joy, Mrs. H. Peck, Mrs. B. MacCarthy, Mrs. I. Johnston, Mrs. I. Core, Mrs. I. Roberts, Mrs. White, Mrs. E. C. Boyle, Mrs. I. Yates, and Mrs. H. Grantham.

CLINIC BOARD LUNCHEON

Mrs. G. I. Woodside, of Woodrow street, entertained the members of the Well Baby Clinic board at luncheon and an afternoon of whist at her home on Thursday of last week. The guests included Mrs. J. Jordan, Mrs. E. C. Boyle, Mrs. C. J. Pauw, Mrs. Eva Page, Mrs. E. Bolger and Mrs. Maynard Chesney.

DALY CITY SCOUTS ENJOY AN OUTING

For the fourth time this summer the Boy Scouts and Cubs of Daly City spent the week end at Camp Snipe. This trip was better than the previous trips. For the first time the entire Council, Messrs. Bodien, Johnson, January, McHugh, Morton and Sunderland, accompanied the boys on their camping trip and the boys enjoyed their company as well as their songs.

The boys were transported to camp by members of the Council and Mr. Charles Fanango.

The thirty-five fellows were soon working hard setting the camp in shape and preparing for supper. One could not find a more varied menu in any restaurant than one finds on one of these camping trips. Supper being over and all dishes washed, the beds were arranged and then wood for the camp fire was gathered. The darkness crept in closer, then the camp fire pushed it to the outer limits of the camp and laughter reigned. With a song here and a harmonica solo there the time soon passed, but the night would not be complete without a word from the Council. They fooled us all by singing a song and it sure was good. As the time passed the fire lowered and the darkness crept in closer and closer and soon all were in bed.

The next morning the boys seemed very eager to start the program for Sunday, as many of them beat the sun up, but the officers slept merrily on until Mr. Sun poked his head over the hill with a bright "Good morning." Soon breakfast was over and the day's activities started, first with a strenuous game of Capture the Flag, directed by Mr. Brauns and Mr. Olsen, the two very able leaders of the Cubs. Then all were called to camp after an hour or so of hard play for a rest. Then the announcement of the treasure hunt was posted. The treasure hunt was something new to the boys, and much interest was shown. The boys, on the blast of a whistle, were off; off on a longer hike than they expected. Four miles over the steepest of hills, the densest of underbrush, and the clues hidden in the most secluded places. These treasure hunts test a boy's ability as to his sense of direction and alertness. The winners of the treasure hunt were Scout Walter Hanchen and Cub Beryl Norton. The treasure was a pair of Boy Scout first aid kits. It was close to two hours before the last of the boys were back at camp and some were tired, and such dirty hands and faces. A good wash in cold water and a rest soon overcame this difficulty.

Then the surprise. Oh, just a mere two dozen water melons; a half a melon to every boy and what a time. The only trouble was that the boys had to wash all over again. Time soon flies at camp and supper was here again. Then it was time to go home, tired but very happy.

The visitors at camp were Mrs. Johnson, Mr. Ralph Springer and Master McHugh.

The officers of the camp were Mr. A. Brauns, Mr. C. Smith and Mr. W. Olsen.

SCHOOLS OF COUNTY TO AID FLOWER FESTIVAL

A spectacular floral parade, with entries from every community in the county, will be a feature of the San Mateo County Fall Flower Festival which will be held on October 23, 24, 25. Every school in the county will send its quota of charmingly dressed children, costumed to represent the multitude of flowers and trees which adorn the gardens of the peninsula. Dave McCullough, chairman of the parade, reports a large number of entries even at this early date. The pageant will take place on Saturday, October 24, in the afternoon. The entries will be varied, some of them being on decorated motor carriers, and some of them made up of marching groups.

San Mateo county is the center of floriculture in the west and chrysanthemums from its huge nurseries adorn every autumn event in the large cities of the whole country. From the tiny pompon variety to the enormous blooms on six foot stems, the chrysanthemums of San Mateo county excel those of other localities. It is around this flower that the floral show will be built, with a myriad of other varieties in evidence, all of them from the huge acreage of San Mateo's gardens.

SCOTT APPOINTED COUNTY ATTORNEY

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Tuesday appointed Edmund Scott as district attorney, to succeed Franklin Swart, who was recently elevated to a judgeship of San Mateo county by Governor James Rolph, Jr.

The appointment of Mr. Scott was made upon a motion by Supervisor John Poole, seconded by Rosalie M. Brown. The vote of the board was unanimous, and was received with loud acclaim by the large gathering of spectators who had gathered in the supervisor's chambers to witness the appointment. Mr. Scott's selection for this important position followed immediately the acceptance of District Attorney Swart's resignation, which was presented to the board during the afternoon session of the board.

The new district attorney thanked the board for the appointment, and pledged his every co-operation in working with the board for the best interests of the county.

Backing Scott's application for the position were petitions signed by thousands of residents of San Mateo county.

The other applicants for the position were Judge Gilbert D. Ferrell, A. J. Stebenne, Daniel Sullivan and J. J. Bulloch.

Edmund Scott, for seven years assistant district attorney of San Mateo county, who is thirty years old, is one of the youngest men in the state to hold the important position of district attorney. He received his education in law at St. Ignatius college, San Francisco. Following his graduation from law school he worked for about two years with a San Francisco law firm before he came to Redwood City to become assistant to District Attorney Franklin Swart.

The new district attorney is unmarried, and lives in Redwood City. He is one of the most popular young professional men in the county and his friends are legion.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

Schools in the Jefferson district are again open and school work in full swing. The classes, as usual, are full, especally in the upper grades.

Two changes have been made in the teaching staff of the Woodrow Wilson, through the resignations of Charles Wauhab and Miss Ruth McGowan. Miss McGowan will teach the coming year in San Mateo. Mr. Mathews has charge of the manual training classes, which are the seventh and eighth grades from Crocker, Jefferson and Woodrow Wilson.

Splendid physical education classes have been organized in the upper grades of the three schools, the girls being under the direction of Miss Earle, the boys under Mr. Mathews.

Several minor improvements have been made throughout the building, and very soon the letters on the front of Woodrow Wilson are to be gilded and the flag-pole painted.

On Tuesday of last week the Parent-Teachers' Association of this section of the district held their first meeting since the opening of school. Later they held a candy sale in the halls of Woodrow Wilson and netted a nice little sum toward the good work which this association is doing.

A large increase in attendance at the General Pershing school has necessitated the building of a new room. Part of the basement was partitioned off, floored, a heater installed and a new, sunny room was added.

The General Pershing kindergarten opened with an enrollment of 45, the largest in its history.

The eighth grade pupils of the Crocker school held their first student body meeting. The following were elected to office: Wesley Fulton, president; Betty Spaulding, vice-president; Alice Raffa, secretary; James Baird, treasurer.

All grammar schools will be closed next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 7, 8 and 9.

SAN MATEO GIRL KILLED IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Pauline Bishop, 14 years old, honor student at the Peninsula grammar school and later at the San Mateo High school, was instantly killed in Seattle Monday afternoon when an automobile in which she was riding with two neighbor boys overturned four blocks from her home.

Pauline moved to Seattle in June, 1930, with her mother, Mrs. W. H. Aughtry, and her stepfather. She was attending a school in Seattle and was preparing for opening next week.

The Statue of Liberty is to be repainted and illuminated. The thing she stands for needs a little refurbishing, too.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Blindfolded and in great fright, the victims were lead down dark halls through secret doors and into cold, mysterious rooms. Then into a dimly lighted passage, at the end of which stood a horrible skeleton.

This was the ordeal which the initiates of the C. S. F. went through. The ceremonies were hld in the high school Tuesday, September 1.

Of course, the new members had to get the spirit of this great organization, so they were required to swallow a mysterious pill. After a second or two, amid the giggles of all the old members, there was a great deal of blowing and spitting and a mad rush for the water fountains. Because of some one's careless mistake (of course it was unintentional), the pills were exchanged for small red peppers. After all, it wasn't a bad error; the initiates drank so much water it was impossible for them to eat any refreshments.

After the embarrassing part of the initiation (for the newcomers), the more solemn part of the ceremony was entered upon. It is a regular custom of the society to require the new members to pledge themselves to certain duties when they receive their pins; such as upholding the high standards of the society and the scholarship plane of the school.

Rose Merlo, president of the organization, officiated at the ceremonies, after which Miss Staib, advisor, welcomed the new members.

A color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in the Senior room, where refreshments were served. Entertainment was furnished by the Victor Salon orchestra, over the radio. A fine spirit was shown throughout the whole evening and everyone had a splendid time.

Friday, September 11, at 1 o'clock, the California Scholarship Federation is planning to put on an entertainment in the high school auditorium. It will consist of motion pictures, numbers by the Glee Club, and a dance or two by a prominent Freshmen girl. Also, life pins will be presented to several of the members who have belonged to the society for two-thirds of their high school career. The program will be interesting, and the society would appreciate the patronage of the residents of the district, as well as the support of the student body of Jefferson. Admission will be only 10 cents.

Chapter 194 of the C. S. F., which is the Jefferson Chapter, is to be hostess for an advisors' convention to be held here this fall. This convention will be attended by approximately fourteen schools located around the bay, for the purpose of exchanging ideas and promoting a feeling of fellowship among the various Chapters. This is a great honor for our school and society, as well as a splendid opportunity to advertise Jefferson, so our Chapter would gladly accept the co-operation of everyone. The convention will be a great burden if all the responsibility is left to our society, but if the school and the district co-operates and helps to put it over in a big way, Jefferson may become one of the foremost schools in California in fostering high scholarship.

Jefferson High night school is in session Tuesday and Thursday evening from 7 to 9 P. M.

There is a course of "English for Foreigners," conducted by Mrs. Milani, who speaks English and Italian with equal fluency.

Miss Robinson has charge of the Commercial department, which consists of typing and bookkeeping. Courses in bookkeeping are planned for beginners as well as for advanced students.

Twelve new Remington noiseless machines have been acquired for the typing department. These machines are a joy to operate. There are also L. C. Smiths, Underwoods, Woodstocks and Standard Remingtons.

There is no charge for text books, the only charge being for tying paper, pens and pencils.

Those who contemplate entering night school should do so at once.

Coach Biaggini is busy making improvements on the baseball grounds. The out-field is being worked over and smoothed down preliminary to the planting of grass. Heretofore there was not enough water to take care of any additional planting, but the new Johnston pump installed by the board of education last spring is now furnishing abundance of water. The coach says that next year the baseball field will be on a par with Jefferson's football field, which is equal to the best in California.

The classes in Typing I are filled to overflowing. Mrs. Ferguson has announced that an additional class will be formed to take care of new students. Miss Smith will be in charge.

The Misses Vivian, Valeria, Myrtle and Lorraine Douglas were dinner guests at the home of their aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth McPhederain, of Risel street, last Sunday.

NATIVE SON NOTES

The drum corps will board the "Padre" at Oakland mole tomorrow night, enroute to Los Angeles. Officer Ed Heim and Fred Collins have been assisting the boys in going through their drills and formations during the past two weeks, and have the corps in fine shape.

On August 26 five new candidates were initiated by the officers of El Carmelo Parlor. Most of these new members are from Colma, bringing the membership to a point where Colma now has about half of the total membership of the local Parlor.

A special meeting was held on Wednesday evening to complete plans for the trip to Los Angeles. Several new members were initiated.

Reservations for the corps have been changed to the Alexandria, instead of the Westminister. Refreshments were served, rounding out a busy evening.

El Carmelo Parlor No. 256, N. S. G. W., is growing. Frequent initiations during the past few months have nearly doubled the membership as of January 1 of this year. This organization also boasts of a well paid up membership, the roll showing that the depression has not hit the spirit of Native Sonism, nor their pocketbooks.

See you in Los Angeles next week.

CHARACTER

"Thoughtful persons, if asked the most valuable possession of man, put good character first, before health and far ahead of earthly possessions," writes Dr. Sanger Brown, assistant commissioner, Department of Mental Hygiene, New York, in the United States Daily.

He continued: "In good character they include fairness, honesty, courage, dependability, willingness to make personal sacrifices for others if the situation demands it, and other noble qualities. These are not rare or heroic virtues; they are possessed by the man in the street. . . .

"It goes without saying, however, that children need proper opportunity and background to develop character. Courage in facing difficulties, sacrifice of personal wants for ideals, fine distinctions between right and wrong, these traits, to become a part of the personality, must grow out of the experiences of life.

"If children fail to develop these qualities, if they are indifferent, callous to others, undependable or deceitful, such conditions are not to be regarded as frailties due to the child's inheritance coming to the surface. Nor should silly explanations, such as minor injuries in infancy, be accepted as a cause. Detrimental influences at home, at school, or in the neighborhood are generally responsible for faulty mental developments of a child.

"Perhaps life is being forced upon him in directions which are distastful or beyond his powers to assimilate. Children need to do disagreeable things at times, but if life is continuously distasteful, they naturally rebel. Perhaps thwarting influences are encroaching upon the child's life, interfering with his development, just as a large and sturdy tree interferes with the growth and development of a delicate plant at its roots.

"If a child is not developing an acceptable character, a thorough study of the entire situation will generally reveal the cause. An understanding of it may make all the difference between the child's success and failure in future life."

COTTON WEEK RESULTS

Observance of special weeks in the interest of movements for this and that seldom produce results that are readily tangible, but a notable exception to the rule is seen in what has followed Cotton Week, June 1 to 6, sponsored by the Cotton Textile Institute.

A check-up of results reported by a business magazine, shows a remarkable stimulation of sales of cotton goods during June and July. One chain of stores reported increased cotton sales over the same period of last year running from 55 to 300 per cent. A large number of stores in various parts of the country showed increases ranging from 13 to 63 per cent.

This is an illustration of what intelligent planning and advertising can do, even in periods of depression such as the present. But, as one swallow doesn't make a summer, neither does one week of intensive sales effort suffice to permanently rehabilitate a declining industry. The cotton people made a wonderful success of their "week," but unless they follow it up with a sustained campaign, the momentum gained may be only temporary.

Cotton has so much to commend it that its increased use should be comparatively easy to bring about through intelligent and persistent education of the public to the beauty, utility and economy of the many new fabrics now available. And a wider use of cotton would benefit grower, manufacturer and consumer alike.

ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

Pedro Magsaysay, former San Mateo cook, sentenced to be executed for murder, has been granted a stay of execution until September 11, by Governor Rolph.

One of the biggest bootleg raids in the history of San Mateo last Monday night netted three suspects, one of them a 21-year-old student.

The bodies of Mrs. Jennie Donaldson, 56, and her son Fred, 20, of East Palo Alto, San Mateo county, who were killed in an automobile accident at Healdsburg last Sunday, were returned to East Palo Alto, where the funeral was held last Wednesday.

Charles M. Fickert, San Francisco attorney, who sprang into prominence as presecutor in the Mooney and Billings cases, has been appointed by Governor Rolph as attorney for the State Board of Medical Examiners. Fickert succeeds Richard M. Lyman, of San Francisco, resigned.

George Tulloch, of San Carlos, struck a match under the hood of his automobile to find out if there was gasoline in the carburetor. There was—lots of it. Tullock is now in the market for a new car.

The California State Fair, opening at Sacramento tomorrow, will have the largest exhibit of live stock, representing $3,000,000 in value, ever to show at the state exposition.

When a gas stove exploded in her home in Oakland, a 92-year-old woman was blown half way across the room and critically burned. The blast followed Mrs. H. M. Lee's attempt to light the stove in her kitchen.

While walking along Roosevelt avenue, Redwood City, Bert Young, a former teamster and well known resident of Woodside, was killed by a car driven by John Chan, who was driving in the same direction in which Young was walking.

San Mateo county authorities are investigating a blaze of mysterious origin which early Sunday swept over nearly 100 acres of dry grass and burned within three quarters of a mile of the San Francisco health farm.

Rev. Sanifer of Louisiana preached continuously for fifty-eight hours. He ought to make a formidable candidate for the Senate.

DIZZY SPELL IS BLAMED FOR AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Mrs. Camille Michelsen, on a visit to San Mateo from New York, is in a San Mateo hospital with a fractured spine, the result of a "dizzy spell" suffered by Woodrow Hartman, 20, Palo Alto truck driver, according to Hartman's account to police. Hartman said he had a momentary lapse while driving his truck behind a car in which Mrs. Michelsen was riding with her husband, Chris Michelsen, on El Camino real near inth avenue. Before he recovered control his truck had crashed the rear of the other car, Hartman said. He and Michelsen suffered minor injuries.

JANE COWL IN "CAMILLE" AT THE CURRAN THEATRE

Jane Cowl, the loveliest Juliet of the present century, will make her first appearance in the role of Alexandre Dumas' celebrated heroine, "Camille," at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, on Monday night, September 7.

Messrs. Belasco and Curran, who have brought Miss Cowl to the Pacific Coast for this production, declare that the presentation of the play here will surpass in magnificence all productions that have hitherto been given of it. Their studios have been working day and night for some time past on the scenic and other effects.

The American stage owes much to Miss Cowl for her splendid presentation of the classic drama. Her "Romeo and Juliet" at the Henry Miller Theatre in New York was the finest production of Shakespeare's immortal tragedy the metropolis had ever seen, and she was classed among the great Juliets of history.

In "Camille," Miss Cowle will undoubtedly be as charming and as wonderfully artistic as she was in Juliet. She has the talent, the training and the beauty to make the character one of the predominating impersonations of her whole career.

Nearly all the leading players have been brought to the Coast from New York by Miss Cowl and the rest of the cast has been selected from the best talent now in Hollywood. Gilbert Roland, celebrated stage and screen star, will play Armand. The play has been staged and adapted by William Keighley, the general stage director of Belasco and Curran, who is well known here from his clever direction of several of that firm's productions.

The Alabama legislature showed great optimism in adopting an income tax and abolishing the present ad valorem levy.

An interesting, if not entirely original, suggestion, is made by Admiral McGowan, retired, former paymaster general of the Navy. It is that a referendum be taken before going to war. If a majority voted for war, all able-bodied men between 18 and 35 would be drafted, and during the war no increase in prices or wages would be permitted. The idea sounds good, but might not work out so well if our adversary jumped on us while the Senate was investigating the election.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

WHEREAS, May Oti Larsen, formerly May Oti Bethell, and Elmar Larsen, her husband, made and executed to the California Pacific Title & Trust Company, a corporation, as trustee for Eleanor F. Wegener, as beneficiary, a certain deed of trust to secure the payment of a certain promissory note, executed by said May Oti Larsen and Elmar Larsen to the said beneficiary in the sum of Two Hundred and Twenty-four Dollars ($224.00), which said note and deed of trust bear date the 30th day of October, and which said deed of trust was on the 10th day of November, 1930, recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, in Volume 505 of Official Records, at page 151; and

WHEREAS, as authorized and permitted by said deed of trust, by written instrument, dated the 22nd day of May, 1931, and recorded May 26, 1931, in Volume 561 of Official Records, at page 9, in said County Recorder's office, said Eleanor F. Wegener substituted and appointed L. M. Wollitz as trustee to execute and carry out the trusts, powers and duties created by said deed of trust in lieu of said California Pacific Title & Trust Company, a corporation; and

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of installments due under the terms of said promissory note, and on the 26th day of May, 1931, the said Eleanor F. Wegener, the beneficiary under said deed of trust, caused to be recorded in the office of the County Recorder of said County of San Mateo, State of California, in Volume 525 of Official Records, at page 234, a notice of the breach and election to sell, under said deed of trust, and on the 26th day of August, 1931, said Eleanor F. Wegener, as such beneficiary, did demand of the undersigned, as such substitute trustee, to forthwith proceed to sell said real property therein and hereinafter described to satisfy said indebtedness;

NOW, THEREFORE, pursuant to said demand and in accordance with the authority conferred upon the undersigned by said deed of trust, said undersigned, as such substituted trustee, does hereby give notice that on the 21st day of September, 1931, at the hour of ten o'clock A. M. of said day, at the steps of the County Courthouse Building, in the City of Redwood City, County of San Mateo, State of California, said trustee will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash in lawful money of the United States of America, all that certain real property, situate, lying and being in the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, and more particularly described as follows:

Lot 11, in Block 27, as designated on the map entitled "Map No. 1 Vista Grande, San Mateo Co., Calif." which map was filed in the office of the Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, on November 5, 1906, in Liber "C" of Maps, at page 35, and a copy entered in Liber 4 of Maps, at page 41.

Dated, this 28th day of August, 1931.

L. M. WOLLITZ, Trustee.

"Here Mr. Jason is your $1.29"

THIS actual incident illustrates one of Bank of America's services to other banks . . . Is it not significant that so many leading financial institutions maintain substantial deposits in Bank of America? . . Who is better qualified to choose a bank than a banker?

ALBERT JASON, Pennsylvania business man, deposited a California check for $1.29. It was returned unpaid.

His Philadelphia bank referred the check to us, with the unusual request that we take any necessary steps, aside from legal action, to collect it.

The check had been issued in another California city, 400 miles away. By air mail it went to the nearest Bank of America office. There a representative of the Bank made a personal investigation. And soon Mr. Jason's $1.29 was on its way to Pennsylvania!

Fortunately, such a transaction rarely occurs among the 250,000 or more "transit items" we handle daily. But it does indicate the thoroughness and flexibility of this Bank's statewide service.

For depositors in Bank of America and other banks, this unique service saves thousands of dollars monthly in interest on funds in transit.

You can profit by the same statewide facilities, the same security so widely appreciated by conservative bankers—through an account with any nearby Bank of America branch.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Shortening by ten miles the paved distance between San Jose and Watsonville as compared with the Chittenden Pass route, the Hecker highway road to Watsonville was opened to traffic recently. The new paving is on the Santa Cruz County side of Mount Madonna, that on the Santa Clara County side having been completed several years ago.

During the year ending June 30, street railways in California operated cars over 91,000,000 miles, carried more than 637,000,000 revenue passengers, and had but one accident fatality. This figure, believed to be a record, was contained in the annual report filed by the Safety Division of the Engineering Department of the State Railroad Commission.

The authority of Will J. French as State Director of the Division of Industrial Welfare over motorboats of less than fifteen tons gross is confined to navigable lakes and streams entirely within the State, Atty.-Gen. Webb has ruled. The last Legislature authorized a measure giving the division regulatory powers for safety devices on such craft, similar to Federal Steamboat Inspection Service regulations.

The Antelope Valley Hay Growers Association is much concerned over the storage of surplus hay in the valley, as the members desire to hold their hay and do not have adequate facilities for the purpose. A committee has been appointed and is trying to interest warehouse companies. A number of pumps have been shut down, due to the low price of hay. The ranchers assert the hay will not pay the power bills and are planning on a seed crop in place of alfalfa.

Attorney General U. S. Webb recently handed down an opinion declaring constitutional the recently enacted law allowing a 5 per cent "differential" in favor of California products bought for municipal or State uses. His opinion was asked by Fred W. Links, superintendent of accounts for the State Department of Finance. It permits California bids to be accepted when they are not the lowest, but are not more than 5 per cent higher than others.

The inventory value of San Bernardino county live stock totals $4,078,500, while the value of live stock produce at the farm amounts to $8,092,240 each year. These are estimates announced by A. L. Campbell, assistant county farm adviser, who bases his calculations on the United States census for 1930, records of the State Department of Agriculture and surveys by the agricultural service of the University of California, plus or minus an estimated increase or decrease to date.

An application for a 15 per cent increase in intra-State freight rates, on file with the Railroad Commission as a companion measure to the interstate petition on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission, was removed from the calendar temporarily at the request of California rail carriers. The explanation made was the carriers wish to have the I.C.C. act on the nation-wide application before formal consideration is given the petition calling for an increase in the rates applicable within State boundaries.

Camel's thorn, puncture vine and other noxious weeds are to be made subject to an eradication campaign in Fresno county. With State funds made available recently, the County Board of Supervisors has appropriated $500 as an emergency fund to start work on two patches of the thorn. This pest often attains a growth of three feet above ground and when it dries in summer it forms an almost impenetrable thicket. The roots penetrate to great distances underground. Carbon bisulphide will be applied in the ground to clean out the weed. Puncture vine is being fought along the highways with a light oil.

The Bull Creek-Dyerville Redwood forest in Humboldt county, comprising 10,000 feet of the finest stand of virgin Redwoods, will officially become part of the California State Park system on Sunday, September 13. Chairman William E. Colby of the State Park Commission, announced that Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institution in Washington, and president of the Save-the-Redwoods League, would be a speaker at the ceremony when the forest is dedicated. The forest was acquired for the State at a cost of $3,000,000. At San Jose steps have been taken to add another Redwood area to the State Park System. The Sempervirens Club of California has recommended that the Butano Redwood Forest of San Mateo County be designated as a park.

The Pomona Valley Pioneer Society will hold its annual all-day picnic in Ganesha Park at Pomona, on September 12, it was announced by Thomas A. Smith of Azusa, who was chosen as president to succeed the late John O. Shewman, at a meeting of the society recently.

Charles A. Purcell can act legally as engineer for the California Toll Authority while employed by the California Highway Commission, State's Attorney-General U. S. Webb ruled recently.

The apple trees planted by the Russians in 1812 when they erected a church and fort and stockade on the Sonoma coast are bearing fruit again this season. They have never failed to do so in the memory of the oldest inhabitants. One of the traditions at Fort Ross is that when the roots of the apple trees, now more than a century old, were pressed into the soil Russian priests blessed the soil and forbade pests to destroy the trees or to prevent them yielding apples each year.

Three lions, two females and a male, were treed and killed recently by Marion Vincent, cattleman of the White River district, and Mrs. Vincent. The lions were found in the Dry Meadow country, a short distance northeast of California Hot Springs near the Kern River, and were brought to bay by Nigger, a veteran lion-hunting dog, and a pup taken out for the first time. The first animal was shot about midnight, and the other two between sunrise and 8 o'clock the following morning.

William Wilson Wurster, San Francisco architect, has been proclaimed the winner of first prize in an annual competition carried on by an Eastern magazine for the best designs in new five to seven-room houses. The winning home was one built in the Santa Cruz mountains for Mrs. Warren Gregory and is a facinating example of the simple almost primitive early California ranch house. Further honors came to California architects with ten out of the entire sixteen awards granted to contestants from this State. Architects from thirty-five States competed.

Appointment of a joint legislative committee to study unemployment problems, paving the way for whatever action the Legislature may eventually have to take, was proposed by Lieut. Gov. Frank F. Merriam. In a letter to Speaker Edgar C. Levey of the Assembly, the Lieutenant Governor suggested that the survey consider needs of various sections of California for the coming winter, how much work must be provided, what projects can be advantageously undertaken and what proportion of necessary funds should be furnished by various governmental agencies.

Satisfactory settlement of the long fight over allocation of California waters from the Colorado River was reported to Governor Rolph recently by Col. Walter E. Garrison, State director of public works. The agreement, worked out in conferences during the last few months by Southern California interests and by the Department of Public Works, ends an extended battle between large cities and agricultural interests of the south, Garrison said. His report continued: "The accord might be called the most important settlement of a water controversy since the Colorado River compact was signed in 1922."

Application to the State for water diversion permits in a Southern California water supply project was filed at Sacramento by the California Municipal Water Supply Company, Ltd. The project is said to be a $40,000,000 undertaking. The application, which affects waters in Mono County, was filed by Henry W. Coil, general counsel for the corporation. Coil, according to water rights experts, is associated with activities of the Southern Sierra Power Company. At the State division of water resources it was announced that the city of Los Angeles filed several years ago on waters in Mono County adjacent to the new project. The city applications are still pending.

Grown weary of delays over a period of years, a body of farmers from the Buttonwillow district called upon the Kern County Board of Supervisors to find out why the State Fish and Game Commission does not take action in establishing an elk refuge in the Buttonwillow district, now that the money is available from the State and county. Farmers of the district report that a great herd of elk numbering from eight to 112 animals, are devouring corn and other crops of the district. Not only do the elk feed on the corn and other crops, but after eating their fill they roll on the ground, destroying considerable areas of the growing plants.

Trapping reptiles for export to Germany is a side line which J. L. Tremble of North Hollywood has practiced for the past four seasons in San Gorgonio Pass. Mr. Tremble and his family establish headquarters at Cabazon and scour the brush from Beaumont to Indio, especially along the northern slopes of Mt. San Jacinto, for desert "varmints." These are captured alive and shipped to Germany where they are used in research work and scientific experiments. This year they have taken nearly 100 California iguanas, thirty-six chuckawallas, three leopard lizards, thirteen sidewinders, one big red rattler, six small burrow snakes and one each of Marquita, copper-collared and green-collared lizards, one red racer and an Arizona python.

Potential sites for the proposed Southern California State Hospital for the Insane have been reduced from more than 100 to six, Director of Finance Vandegrift said recently, and final selection is expected to be made shortly.

Orders were received from Washington by Mare Island navy yard officials recently, halting the modernizing of the nautical training ship California State, for the work on which Mare Island submitted a successful bid of "under $200,000." Navy yard officials are at a loss to explain the action.

Aviation in Canada

One of Canada's Far-Flung Trading Posts.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

ALTHOUGH the revised itinerary of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh's vacation flight to Japan and China routed them over many square miles of practically unexplored territory in northwest Canada, much of the country they traversed between Washington, D. C. and Baker Lake, Northwest Territories, has been flown by Canadian government air surveys and by aerial prospectors.

The native Indians, Eskimos and Royal Canadian mounted policemen of the Hudson Bay district have not before had such distinguished aerial visitors, but the sight of an airplane, either in winter or summer, is no new experience to them.

Few people, except those who have seen it, realize the high degree to which northern Canada has organized its air transport. Using water routes, open in summer, it has laid down a wide network of fuel and supply stations at strategic points. All around Hudson Bay, at convenient spots; down the Mackenzie river to Lake Athabaska; about Great Slave and Great Bear lakes and along the Arctic coast, and down the Yukon, these depots are set up. Now practically every district in continental Canada is within flying range of one of these stations. In fact, if you picture the Canadian airways as linked up with the air net in the United States, the broad statement is true that, given good weather, no place on the North American continent is now more than one or two days' flight from a railway.

It was in survey work and in patrols of her millions of acres of forest reserves that Canada first used planes. The first attempt to use a plane on a long distance commercial mission was made by an oil company in 1921. To meet an emergency, it started two all-metal monoplanes, on skis, from the railhead at Peace river on a 1,200-mile flight to Norman on the Mackenzie river. The weather was vile; blizzards with temperatures of 40 and 50 below zero alternated with mild spring thaws.

Pilots Are Resourceful.

One plane, landing on crusted snow, at Simpson, broke through so that a ski collapsed and a propellor blade struck the ground. But the resourcefulness of Canadian pilots, in a smash, far from shops and spare-part stores, is revealed in Pilot Gorman's laconic report on this accident:

"March 30 . . . Will try and have a new 'prop' made here. Oak sleigh boards are available; also some glue. And a Hudson's Bay company man named Johnson is an old cabinetmaker . . . We can use the damaged propeller as a pattern and use the Catholic mission workshops here.

"March 31. Found moosehide glue. Borrowed some boat clamps, so that the boards can be clamped tightly together in making the laminated propeller.

"April 15. Tested the new propeller. It works satisfactorily."

The amazing degree to which planes now wipe out miles and save time in Canada was shown by flights and photography work carried on from a base on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. From this stormy coast Capt. Vernon ("Turk") Robinson made flight after flight, bearing surveyors and supplies over a mountainous coast line into the interior plateau. He carried drums of gas by air, making caches at points far distant; from these deposits planes could operate even farther inland. Thus Grand Falls, on the Hamilton river, was finally reached. Then, after a day's flight of 800 miles, starting from Burnt lake, photographs were taken of the falls; and the next day the engineer-photographer was back in Quebec having his pictures developed. By sea and canoe, the only other means of travel, this task would have taken all summer!

Adventure, grim and perilous, is often the lot of pilots and passengers in flight over the long stretches of empty wilderness which intervene between fuel caches, camps, or settlements.

Meet With Perilous Adventures.

One party, from a base on the inhospitable Gulf of St. Lawrence, was forced down by bad weather and had to alight on an unknown lake. A floating log ripped the bottom from their hull and the flying boat sank. Casting aside their clothing, the crew swam for the shore. They made land minus any food or equipment, and spent a week, naked, in the woods, in the midst of the black-fly season. The days were blazing hot, but the nights freezing cold. Two men, badly hurt in the crash, reached the shore only with the greatest difficulty.

Happily, however, in the party was a land surveyor, who managed to swim ashore with a hand ax and a water-tight box of matches. Using his ax, he made a rude shelter. By snaring rabbits in the woods and killing frogs with sticks, the party kept alive for seven days, till rescued by another flying boat sent to seek them.

The search for the lost French flyers, Coli and Nungesser, in May, 1927, nearly cost the lives of Captain Robinson and his crew. They had flown along the north shore as far as the Strait of Belle Isle, then still full of ice, when a storm forced them down. Anchoring late in the evening, in the shelter of a rocky ledge, they curled up in their cockpit to await better weather. Suddenly the wind veered, blowing a gale from the open sea. Their anchor dragged and their ship smashed on the rocks. They saved their emergency kits, made a fire on shore from the wreckage of their plane, and cooked breakfast. They walked 20 miles along the beach, to a lighthouse and signal station, to report their whereabouts.

Returning from a flight up the Ashuapmuchuan river, one pilot brought with him an old Indian. When invited to ride, the red man seemed in no way perturbed at the prospect. He calmly donned helmet and goggles and settled himself in the front cockpit, as if flying were an everyday act with him. In a half hour he flew downstream a distance which just previously it had taken him six days to cover by canoe.

On landing he climbed out, stretched himself, and said to the pilot:

"Bon canot! How much him cost?"

That Indian saw the advantage of air travel in the north country. Undoubtedly he graphically pictured to himself what paddlework he could save for himself and family in their long annual canoe trips to their hunting grounds, if they owned such a "bon canot"!

Flying in Winter.

In north Quebec, flying goes on summer and winter.

On a January morning Capt. Kenneth Saunders, chief pilot of the Canadian Fairchild company, started north with an engineer and a Hudson's Bay company official, on a visit to some of the northern trading posts. Unless one flies, it usually takes six weeks of mushing on snowshoes, with a dog team to haul baggage, to reach these wilderness outposts. Regions between posts are wholly uninhabited. Snow lies from four to six feet deep; trails, such as they are, usually follow the lakes and rivers, through a broken country of small timber.

When Saunders and party left Roberval the day was bright and fair, but the thermometer was 25 below. An hour up the Ashuapmuchuam they sighted the first trading post and circled to land on the frozen river. Either they struck a spot where a warm spring had thawed the ice or else an early fall of snow on this ice had prevented a thicker formation; anyway, the plane broke through. The men had barely time to crawl from the cabin before the whole fuselage was under water.

Luckily, they were near the post, and Tom Moar, the Indian in charge, volunteered to walk out the hundred miles to civilization with a message. He started away within half an hour, taking only an ax, some matches and a chunk of moose meat. He made the trip in the record time of five days, sleeping twice, on the second and fourth night, in holes in the snow lined with balsam boughs, and traveling continuously the rest of the time.

Meantime the Canadians set about salvaging their plane. They made a platform of logs around the machine on which to work. As the water was not deep, a tripod of poles cut from the woods was built over the aircraft and its wings were removed.

Salvaged Their Plane.

Seven days later a rescue machine reached the scene with hoisting tackle and tools. The wrecked plane was moved safely to shore. A tent was erected around the front of the fuselage and the engine, which was a solid mass of ice. This ice was chopped out, and then a stove was lit in the tent and gradually the cabin and engine thawed out.

The metal propellor, badly bent, was straightened and the engine reassembled. The carburetor, though frozen in a solid block of ice for eight days, again worked perfectly.

On the 6th of February the plane was again ready for flight. Accompanied by the rescue machine, which had made several trips to ferry in gas, provisions, and little gifts for Mrs. Moar and her family (on whose hospitality the crew had been dependent during the salvage operations), it took off safely and flew back to Roberval.

Northern British Columbia is as inaccessible a country as can be found on this continent. Cut off from the Pacific by the panhandle of Alaska, with its coastal mountains and glaciers, it can be reached only by the Stikine, the Peace, or the Liard rivers and their tributaries.

THE STORY

Harold Norman Atridge, an orphan, lives with his great aunt Matilda, who reared him. At her death he finds himself penniless. At the close of the war he gets work in a bank. Taking a message to Marjorie Clarence, he finds her father in the throes of delirium tremens. Harold promises to take Marjorie into the country next day. They have an exciting day. They miss the last train back to London. On his way to his lodgings, Harold sees a shooting affray during which one of the participants tosses a leather case to him. It contains letters in French written by King Raphael of Lesser Avaria. Returning home next day he finds his roommate bound and gagged and the room ransacked.

"Shall I come with you?" asked Harold.

"Of course you can, if you like," said Puddingface, with hardly a touch of condescension.

Hatted and gloved, two elegant young men of Southern Suburbia strolled forth to take the Sunday evening air on Morley common. Save that the left eye of one of them was a deep orange hue, they were just like any other two young men on Morley common, so that there was no apparent reason why two other men in clothes of strange cut should follow them at a discreet distance wherever they went.

Puddingface was unaware of this pursuit, and he chatted and laughed and told indelicate stories and eyed the girls light-heartedly; but it was different with Harold. He sweated hotly under his clothes, and he only returned distracted answers to Puddingface's sallies.

"Nice bit o' fluff there," said Puddingface. "Seen her about before, and I like her. She's got a figure, an' that's more than most of the girls have nowadays."

The girl he indicated was inclined to embonpoint; it was hardly surprising that Puddingface should have a fellow feeling toward her. She noticed that Puddingface's attention was drawn to her, and she squeezed the arm of her girl companion and giggled shrilly.

"What about it, old man?" asked Puddingface.

"Eh? Oh—um—" Harold tore his eyes away from the hawklike profile of one of his pursuers; Puddingface mistook inarticulation for assent. With a graceful raising of his hat he moved alongside the two fair unknowns; Harold was drawn irresistibly after him.

"Nice evening," said Puddingface.

The girls giggled and said nothing, but with mutual consent all four began to turn away from the crowd and wander toward a less frequented part of the common.

"Seen you here before, haven't I?" asked Puddingface.

"Yes. We've seen you, too," said the fat girl.

From the meager beginning conversation developed marvelously. Harold had only the faintest knowledge of what they talked about; he was too bothered with other matters.

"I like to get away from the crowd when I can," Puddingface said haughtily. "It's such a rough lot on Sunday evenings generally."

"Quaite," said the fat girl.

"Pity they don't have a band here like they do in the parks, isn't it?" said the other girl to Harold. "I'm awfully fond of music, aren't you?"

"Oh yes," said Harold. The tone of the voice had seemed to suggest that an assent was called for in reply—that was why he said "yes"; he didn't know what he had been asked.

"We have got a loud speakah at home," said the fat girl. "Don't you love listening in?"

"We've got a loud speaker, too" quoth Puddingface. "Only you can't turn it off when you like. It's our landlady."

The girls giggled uproariously.

"Oh, you are a one," screamed the fat girl. "You are a one."

So loud was her voice it attracted the attention of several people about. Harold suddenly found himself gripping the sides of his chair and flushing a hot purple; for two of the people who turned their heads and stared were Mr. and Mrs. Tilling, out sedately taking the air after evening service. Harold saw her eyes flash over the group. She deigned to recognize him and acknowledge his lifted hat, but at the same time Harold knew that her gimlet eyes had not missed the cheap silk stockings and the flamboyant hat, any more than her ears had missed the piercing giggles. What a splendid tale Mrs. Tilling would have to unfold to Marjorie on her return! He bit his nails in frantic exasperation.

They sat for nearly an hour, during which Harold made four answers to questions and proffered not one single unsolicited remark. The girl with the sidelong eyes soon left him alone and turned away toward Puddingface. Harold sat mum and thought dreadful things.

At twenty minutes past nine Puddingface stood up.

"We've got to go now and interview that loud speaker I told you about," he said. "Supper's at half past. See you next week?"

The girls agreed after interchange of glances.

"Half past seven where we saw you tonight?"

"Yes."

They separated.

"Not so bad, were they?" said Puddingface to Harold as they walked back across the common. "That fat one's a bit of hot stuff. Bet we miss supper next Sunday."

The one bright spot on a desolate horizon to Harold's mind was that Puddingface made no jocular reference to his wordlessness. That was only a poor consolation—seeing that two other people were still fifty yards behind, following remorselessly in their tracks as far as Scae Fell avenue. One of them had a hawklike profile which Harold had noticed before; the other had a heavy mustache and spectacles. To Harold's guilty conscience it was amazing that Puddingface had not noticed them and commented on their appearance, but, truth to tell, their shadowing was efficient and inconspicuous.

Danvers and Marks were absent from supper. Harold heaved a sigh of relief, glad of this postponement of the issue—a furious quarrel in two hours' time was always to be preferred to one awaiting his arrival.

Yet his relief was premature, for Mrs. Pound had hardly ceased carving when a latchkey was heard in the door, and the unnecessarily loud voices of Marks and Danvers made themselves evident.

Harold and Puddingface looked at each other. Harold's heart seemed to stop beating as he heard them running upstairs. He heard them stride along the first landing to their room over the dining room. He even heard them open the door. And then his heart sprang violently once more into motion, leaping up and down with a beat of, apparently, at least six inches amplitude, for from upstairs there came a thunderous crash, followed by another and another. The room shook with the concussions; an electric light bulb cracked and flashed into darkness with a sudden report.

"My goodness!" exclaimed Mrs. Pound, leaping in her chair.

Puddingface laughed nervously. Harold still sat with a mouthful of half-chewed beef. To be worried and anxious about a little broken china and the wrath of Marks and Danvers, when he had a king's love letters under his shirt and half a dozen men with revolvers waiting for him in the street and when less than twenty-four hours ago he had been an eye-witness of a brutal murder showed a lack of sense of proportion, but he was horribly worried, nevertheless.

Soon Danvers came bursting into the dining room again, followed by a limping Marks.

"Who the blazes has been playing the fool in our bedroom?" demanded Danvers.

"You never saw such a mess!" asserted Marks.

"The water jug's smashed to smithereens."

"And the shaving mug."

"And all the bedclothes are tied up together."

"Who in the world—?" said Mrs. Pound looking balefully round at her other boarders.

Height of Ocean Waves

H. A. Marmer, assistant chief, division of tides and currents of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, says that with a wind of 60 miles an hour, waves of about 30 feet in height may be expected in the open sea. With a wind of 80 miles an hour, the resulting waves would be somewhat less than 40 feet. From the observations of the heights of waves made by various observers and by different methods, it appears that waves exceeding 40 feet occur only in severe storms and that 50 feet may be taken as the extreme height of waves of the sea due to wind. When two great waves intersect, a peak may be thrust to a height of 60 feet or more. Similarly, when a large wave breaks against an object, part of the water may shoot considerably above the height of the crest.

MAKE FIRE PREVENTION PERMANENT

Fire Prevention Week is to be observed this year from October fourth to tenth.

As in the past, a comprehensive program of education on fire prevention activities has been devised. Members of fire departments will conduct inspections and make talks to school children. Public officials will take part in the program and call upon citizens to participate. The newspapers will give the week publicity, in both news and editorial columns. Theatres will make announcements concerning the week from the stage and in printed programs. Insurance agents will make addresses, prepare window exhibits, conduct essay and poster contests, etc. Business men, churches, civic organizations, clubs—all will strive to make the week produce results.

If the experience of other years is duplicated the week will be successful, so far as lowering fire losses during that brief period goes. Citizens absorb the lessons taught them during the week and then return to careless, fire-breeding habits, although each year this educational week causes some advance in permanent fire prevention activity.

It should be the aim of every individual to make fire prevention an ever-present, personal duty, and thus help save the greater part of ten thousand lives and a half a billion dollars worth of property each year.

Judging by the husbands some of them pick out, it seems that the ladies are not hard to please after all.

PAYING THE PRICE

It may be true that military men favor the maintenance of larger armies and navies than the average civilian deems necessary. But that they want war is not true. No class is more opposed to war than those who must inevitably take part in it when it comes. Particularly is this true of those who have experienced the horrors of war.

But military men who have seen the slaughter of untrained or partially trained troops are naturally believers in adequate measures of preparedness. As a rule they have little faith in the idea that war is a thing of the past.

At the same time they realize that public sentiment is against a large regular military establishment, and content themselves with making the best preparations possible with the means Congress provides. Their attitude is well expressed by Major Charles P. Summerall, who said:

"We have never fought a war with trained and well equipped troops, and we never shall do so. It is inconsistent with the form of our government and the psychology of our people to maintain adequate military preparedness. They would rather pay the price that has followed every war than spend a part of the amount in preserving peace."

OFFENSIVE SIGNS

In keeping with what is becoming a world-wide protest against offensive signs and billboards, the authorities of Paris have decreed that no signs shall be displayed on its famous thoroughfare, the Champs Elysees, which advertise any goods not actually sold on the premises.

Recently protests were heard in Spain concerning objectionable American billboards which mar the landscape. In this country the women's clubs and other organizations are waging a campaign against the billboard nuisance.

By the erection of signboards which spoil the natural scenery along the highways, and by their encroachments in residential sections of our cities, the billboard people have brought upon themselves the just resentment of that section of the public which has regard for appearances.

When we become more civilized, the billboard will go the way of the town crier. As an advertising medium it is an anachronism already.

ROUGH RIDER MYTH

Probably ninety-nine persons out of a hundred who have read or heard of the famous Roosevelt's Rough Riders of the Spanish-American war believe that those ambitious troopers charged up San Juan Hill on horseback, booted and spurred, sabers waving in the air.

A writer in a recent magazine graphically portrayed their exploit as that of "500 men on horseback standing in their stirrups and galloping along, shouting one to another like polo players."

The truth is that the Rough Riders marched and fought on foot in Cuba, as did other Calvary regiments, their horses having been left behind when they sailed from the United States.

Due to Colonel Roosevelt's vivid personality and the large amount of publicity given the regiment by New York newspaper men, the Rough Riders received the lion's share of the credit for the victory at Santiago. That they were brave men and good fighters none will deny, but they were in that respect no different from other troops, some of whom received scant attention in the dispatches.

PRODUCE SHIPMENTS

It is somewhat surprising to know how wide is the territory from which large cities of the country draw their food supplies, particularly vegetables. A few illustrations will show how the expense of transportation must greatly increase the price of farm and garden products to the ultimate consumer.

White potatoes are shipped to Chicago from no less than thirty-seven states, to Indianapolis from thirty-three, to Cleveland from thirty-two, and two Birmingham from thirty-one states. Practically all the larger cities of the middle west receive their potatoes from more than twenty states, some being shipped by rail a distance of 2,500 miles. New York receives apples from twenty-three states, the maximum haul being 3,150 miles; potatoes from twenty-one states, lettuce, canteloupes and onions from seventeen states, tomatoes and peaches from thirteen states. Chicago's apple supply comes from twenty-five states, cabage from twenty-three, onions from twenty, peaches from nineteen, tomatoes from seventeen, strawberries and sweet potatoes from sixteen, and cantaloupes from fourteen states.

While the long haul of early vegetables is due largely to the varying climate of different sections of the country, it seems that a system of marketing might be developed which would eliminate a considerable part of the transportation charges involved in getting these products to the consumer.

General Smedley Butler recently objected to speaking before the mike. Probably afarid the thing would misquote him.

Oddly enough, when we send it by ship it is a cargo, and when it goes by car it is a shipment.

Mr. Wise of Kansas, alleged to have five living wives, once more illustrates how little there is in a name.

Charles Larkins of Missouri declares his 20-year-old hen still lays. Or he lies.

SURPRISING FIGURES

To those who like to delve into statistics of production, commerce and the like, the actual figures quite often afford some odd surprises. For example, while Florida is classed among the cotton producing states, one county in Alabama grows more cotton than is grown in the entire state of Florida.

Another surprise is seen in the record of Pennsylvania's exports. The Keystone state has been established for years as a leader in the production of coal, iron and steel. But trade figures for 1930 show that Pennsylvania's principal item of export is lubricating oil, with shipments valued at $26,775,230. Bituminous coal ranks second, anthracite third, iron and steel fourth, and gasoline fifth.

The state exports more than a hundred leading products, ranging from silk and rayon hosiery and unmanufactured hair to automobiles and railway cars. Oil is on the export throne, however, due to its extensive refining interests and the fact that the state produces a large part of the famous Pennsylvania grade crude oil, the premier crude of the world.

Perhaps it is not inappropriate that oil should assume the export lead in the Keystone state, for it was the scene of the first oil drilled and produced in commercial paying quantities.

BUGS WITH NEW HEADS

One of the most interesting biological experiments recently noted is that of grafting the heads of one kind of bug on the bodies of another, a feat accomplished by a German scinetist.

It is said that when the head of a beetle was grafted on the body of a June bug it tried to burrow in refuse matter and made no effort to fly, while the reverse experiment caused a beetle with a June bug's head to try to climb a tree. When a female head was grafted on the body of a male insect of the same species, its actions became characteristic of the female, and vice versa.

Certain insects are said to be well adapted to such experiments, as they can live for a considerable time after decapitation, because their organs of breathing are distributed over their whole bodies.

Possibly some day scientists will prove the fallacy of the old saying: "You must not expect old heads on young shoulders."

Government experts have a new method of analyzing the human breath in six minutes. Some wives can make a rough analysis in about six seconds.

POPULAR COLMA COUPLE UNITED IN MARRIAGE

Two popular young people of Colma were united in marriage at S. S. Peter and Paul church, San Francisco, Sunday, August 30, at 3:30 o'clock, when Miss Lida Casentini, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Casentini, became the bride of Mr. Frank Gambastani, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Gambastiani.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a beautiful white satin wedding dress and a flowering veil with orange blossoms. She carried a beautiful wedding bouquet. She was attended by Miss Antonette Casentini, maid of honor, who was wore a peach taffeta dress with hat to match and carried a yellow Colonial bouquet. The matron of honor was Mrs. Louis Godi, who wore a peach taffeta dress with hat to match and blue shoes. The bridesmaids were Misses Victorine Bertini, Ester Durbin, Rose Olcese, and Amelia Casentino, who wore peach colored taffeta dresses and peach hats with Nile green ribbons and green shoes and carried Colonial bouquets.

The bride's brother, Mr. Michael Casentini, was the best man. The ushers were Messrs. Louis Godi, Angelo Casentini, Louis Bertetta, F. Capelli and Leo Gambastiani. The best man and ushers wore tuxedos.

After the church ceremonies a delicious Italian dinner was served to about eighty friends and relatives at the Fleur de Italia roof garden in San Francisco. In the evening an elaborate reception and dance was held in Colombo auditorium, about 300 guests attending. Miss Elsie Silicani caught the wedding bouquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Gambastiani left on their honeymoon, expecting to go as far as Tiajuan and to Yosemite Valley. Upon their return they will reside in Colma.

The number of American Telephone and Telegraph Company stockholders is now over 590,000.

The well-known stork, too, seems unable to solve the distribution problem.

There is some slight hope of reforming everyone except a professional reformer.

Even after they are declared void, matrimonial bonds often yield handsome returns in the way of alimony.

Natives in equatorial Africa still try a person suspected of crime by giving him poison. If he dies, he is considered guilty; if he survives, it is taken as evidence that he is innocent. If some American bootleg concoctions were used, there would probably be few acquittals.

A new pastime is selecting lists of the hardest words to spell. Here are a few to try on your stenographer: Paraffine, supersede, rarefy, picnicking, battalion, sacrilegious, tranquility, harrassed, guaging, unparalleled, embarrassment.

Speaking of words, the inconsistencies of the English language in matters of tense are interesting. We have swim, swam, swum; why not skim, skam, skum? If we may say speak, spoke, spoken, why not seek, soak, soaken? Or if get, got, gotten, why not let, lot, lotten? And if see, saw, seen, why not flee, flaw fleen?

A Connecticut newspaper evidently assigned a sport reporter to cover a literary program. Works of Victor Hugo were discussed and the story said that one of the ladies present spoke on "The Halfback of Notre Dame."

It is a curious historical fact that the five Presidents of the United States who died in office were elected in 1840, 1860, 1880, 1900 and 1920, at twenty year intervals. Wonder if this peculiar circumstance will cause any superstitious aspirant to say "I do not choose to run in 1940."

The worst play on record is reported from an Eastern city, where it is declared that the disgusted audience began leaving soon after the first act had gotten well under way. A little later they were pouring out of the theater in droves, causing some wag to shout: "Women and children first."

Henry Ange, of Pleasantville, N. J., thought to do a 32-year-old mare a kindness by shooting her. The mare seems to have had similar ideas about Henry, and when he approached on his errand of mercy she kicked him to death.

Rev. Henry Tiechmann, of Berlin, was suspended by a council of his church for "degrading a serious religious ceremony." His offense consisted of marrying two couples in an airplane. Then his critics went up in the air.

From a missionary in the Solomon Islands comes word of the sad plight of the natives, with suggestions for their relief. He writes: "Our small force of brethren are unable to cope with the distress which prevails in this benighted land of cannibals. Many natives are starving. Please send a few more missionaries."

In 1916 Fred Barnes, an English actor, befriended a millionaire of Yonkers, N. Y., during a Zeppelin raid over London. Recently the millionairs died, leaving $425,000 to Barnes in token of his gratitude. Not to be outdone in generosity, Barnes in turn has given $100,000 of his legacy to hospitals of Yonkers.

A pig belonging to Merle Harley, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., might be rated as the Lindbergh of the porkers. A bald eagle swooped down on the unsuspecting pig and started to fly away with him, when Harley grabbed a rifle and brought down the bird from a height of about twenty feet. Landing safely on the ground, the pig ran back to his trough and resumed his slop, instead of strutting about like a hero.

H. Angleovitch, a cabinet minister of Jugo-Slavia, experienced a rude shock to his dignity upon his early morning arrival by train at Belgrade. Arousing from sleep he foud that thieves had stolen all his clothes from an open window in his compartment and he was able to leave the train only after members of the crew had lent him some workmen's apparel.

This is a fish story, but George R. Besser, superintendent of the Denver civic center, says it is true. Three months after he placed sixteen goldfish in a small pool for breeding, their number had increased to about 200,000, which required their transfer to a larger lake in one of the city parks.

Herr Burchmann, of Berlin, was recently given a three-year sentence for robbery, and laughed heartily, thinking it a good joke. It seems that in addition to being philosophical, he also has a sense of humor. The joke lay in the fact that he had already been given sentences aggregating 208 years, for committing some 500 robberies, so he didn't mind three years more.

An odd account of a church service recently appeared in the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette, which told that "Last night Evangelist Scoville spoke on 'The Bible and Hell,' and Mr. Deloss Smith sang 'We Will Meet You There.'"

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

John Garland Pollard, Governor of Virginia, says:

"Education is no substitute for work. It only enables us to direct our work more intelligently.

"After having become educated, the eternal question will be, 'What use are you making of what you have learned?' It is a disgrace to have an education and not use it for the benefit of your community.

"The man who acquires knowledge and keeps it for himself and to himself is an intellectual miser, as despicable as the selfish hoarder of money. What really counts is not what we know—it's what we DO with what we know.

"In that final day when we stand before the Judge of all the earth to give an account of deeds done in the flesh, the question will not be what you knew, but what you DID with what you knew."

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

From Stage Driver to Railroad President

THE Hon. Ginery Twitchell rose from obscurity to become one of the leading figures of the era of stage coach transportation, then president of the railroad that put his stage lines out of business, and then a member of congress.

Many a New England child, hearing the cry of "Ginery's coming! Ginery's coming!" and probably wondering what a "ginery" was, watched with delight as a great stage coach with six prancing, reeking, foaming horses came to a stop in front of the Bay-state house, in Boston, or the taverns of Worcester, Mass., or Brattleboro, Vt.

Seated atop the magnificent vehicle was a dignified, selfcontained man, ruddy of face, his stout body swathed in a heavy greatcoat and on his head a tall silk hat. Ginery Twitchell would sit erect on the coachman's seat, gather the reins well in hand and suddenly be off with a great rattle of wheels and blowing of horns.

Ginery Twitchell was called "Honorable" even then. Probably it was because of his vast reputation for integrity, and probably also because he was an inveterate politician, and always had a finger in the political maneuverings and plottings of his part of New England.

His stage coach was one of the most famous that ever rolled over the rough roads of the early days of the United States. It was built in 1837 by Henry T. Breck of Worcester, and never was repaired beyond occasionally getting a new coat of varnish. In 1840, at the request of the citizens of Barre, Vt., seats were added to the top, so that the great coach carried 32 persons, 12 inside and 20 outside.

It once carried 62 young women from Worcester on a blackberry excursion, with eight horses drawing this record load. During the presidential campaign of 1840, it carried the political leaders to and from meetings around Quinsigamond.

His last driver, Henry S. Miner, narrates that Twitchell before the days of the railroad collected election votes on horseback, and once rode from Greenfield, Mass., to Worcester, a distance of 54 miles, in four and a half hours. He had relays of fresh horses every six or ten miles, and made the ride at night.

In the days when he was a post rider, before he had accumulated sufficient funds to buy an interest in a stage coach line, he once slept in his clothes, including buckskin underwear, in the American House in Worcester for a week, waiting for despatches from British steamers. He also had men and fresh horses waiting the entire week along the road to Norwich, Conn.

When the boats arrived, Twitchell mounted his horse and started for Norwich. He met the boat, and delivered the despatches in New York hours ahead of any other post line.

Ginery Twitchell was a great favorite with those who rode with him, and the seat beside the driver was eagerly vied for, even in bad weather. He had an inexhaustible fund of racy anecdotes with which he regaled his acquaintances. The people along his post and stage routes trusted him with their business commissions, and he performed a service similar to that of the express companies of today.

After a long period of self-denial in his early days, he bought a stage coach and two horses from a Mr. Stockwell, and established a stage line between Brattleboro and Worcester. In 1843 he owned and operated a line between Barre and Worcester, and later established a stage line from Greenfield to Brattleboro.

In that year the postmaster general at Washington advertised for contracts to carry the mail and Twitchell, instead of bidding for one route, went to Washington and obtained several. Within a short time he was the largest stage operator in New England, owning a large number of fine stage lines and coaches.

One of his feats was driving a coach from Worcester, Mass., to Hartford, Conn., a distance of 60 miles, in 3 hours and 20 minutes, through deep snow. That was on January 23, 1846.

When the railroads came, Twitchell turned to the new mode of transportation, and became first president of the Boston & Western railroad.

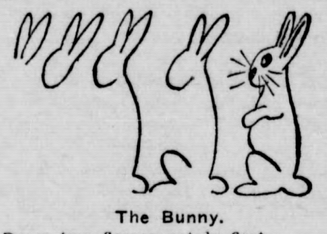
The Drawing Lesson

The Nest.

What is this, a pile of rocks?
No, it can't be that;
This next drawing's something like
A funny sort of hat.

What a terrible mistake!
It is a nest, I see;
And full of eggs—I wonder where
The little bird can be?



The Bunny.

Draw two flower petals first,
And add a center, round;
Draw a line, a sort of stem,
That reaches to the ground.

Then in front, a sprig of grass,
But, say, this drawing's funny—
Why it is not a flow'r at all,
It is a perky Bunny!

A House of Shell

Most of the curious things you pick up on the seashore are really wrecks—deserted houses, cast-off clothes, or outgrown cradles and retreats of some of the many strange and wonderful creatures that live in the sea.

One of the prettiest is a lovely box as white as snow, and more fragile than the thinnest china. It is covered with a pattern of tiny knobs and holes, that look like delicate carving, and it is round in shape, flattened on top exactly like a common white turnip. These boxes are found in a number of sizes, from little to big, the size of a pea to as big as the top of a drinking glass, and in some parts of the world as big as a dinner plate.

In this elegant house lived a very strange fellow called a sea urchin. His mouth opened on the under side of his body, where the larger hole is in the shell, and at that point he had five big teeth, quite able to cut his food. His house, this pretty box, was covered with long, sharp spines like thorns, that made him an unpleasant fellow to handle.

His feet were perhaps the oddest parts of him, though everything about him was strange. To begin with, he had dozens of them; one coming out of each of the holes on the shell. Then they could be stretched out as long as he wished, and the legs (you may call them that) were, of course, not larger than threads. The foot itself, at the end of each thread-like leg, was round and flat; and when the urchin wanted to walk he thrust out his feet on one side till they touched something, where they stuck, and held there, it is said, by drawing out the air under them; then he pulled himself along.

One of the most interesting things is the way the sea urchin grows. The baby sea urchin is about as big as the dot you make over a small i. You can just see it moving slowly about in the water; but with a microscope it proves to be an elegant little creature, of the oddest shape, perhaps more like a painter's easel than anything else. It is made of clear, glassy-looking rods, with rose-colored tips on some of the upper ones, and covered with little specks that reflect light, and made it very brilliant. It moves about by waving in the water fringes of delicate hairs, cilia the books call them, and it is so very small that the waving of hairs will move it about.

How do you suppose the sea urchins' delicate shell house gets bigger? He never has but one, and when he was the size of a pin-head it was not too big for him, and when he is as large as a teacup it still fits him. Let me tell you. When the owner lived in it the box was made of several hundred plates, and covered by the thin skin of the living urchin. One work of this skin was to enlarge the house as fast as he grew, and it was done by constant adding of building material to the edges of each piece; thus each one became bigger, and yet they always fitted together; so you may say that the box grew as well as the urchin that lived in it.

Surely more wonders were never packed into one small box; and we have not told you all, either.

The Kitchen Cabinet

My thoughts come flying forth in flocks
Gay, eager ones of vivid hue,
But oh, the little winged things
That will not flutter through!

The little lovely wistful things
That start and then draw back with fear,
These are the ones of all
That I hold vastly dear.

CARE OF THE TEETH

Less than a hundred years ago the tooth brush was practically unknown as well as dentifrices; now one hears of a new kind of brush or a new dentifrice every few months; however, those who lived in the early days without any of these (now considered necessities) had teeth that were much better than we possess today. By ordinary reasoning one would say that these things injure the teeth, but we must go back of that to find the trouble. Our grandmothers and great grandmothers ate food that was coarse and rough, which scoured the teeth and gums and at the same time supplying the necessary minerals and vitamins to keep the teeth and gums healthy.

Teeth and gums need to work to keep healthy just as does every other part of the body. Food that slips down easily is not well masticated, gives the teeth no work at grinding, which they are made to do. Foods that require a great deal of chewing are needed for healthy teeth. Corn bread, nuts, apples—skins and all—green, fresh vegetables, such as cabbage, lettuce, celery, green onions, all need to be well chewed; this is not all; they are rich in the elements needed for a healthy body.

Recent research has taught us that tooth decay is observed where vitamin C is lacking. Dr. Milton T. Hanke of the University of Chicago in his study of the average American diet, showed it to be deficient in this valuable vitamin C. The reason for this is that this particular vitamin is very unstable, is easily destroyed by cooking and it appears that the body cannot store up this vitamin for any length of time, so we need our new supply daily.

Both orange and lemon juice contain liberal quantities of vitamin C, also green vegetables as well as other fruits.

My Neighbor Says:

SEASONING added to the water in which a ham is being boiled help give a delicious, savory meat. The amounts can be varied to suit the taste, but the following kinds and proportions are satisfactory for one ham: Two carrots, diced; one small onion stuck with several cloves; a stalk or two of celery, diced; one sprig of parsley, and a few pepper-corns.

If apples or tomatoes are pricked with a fork before baking they will not break open while cooking.

When you are cleaning a room make some powdered whitening into a thin paste with cold water and smear this mixture over the panes with a piece of rag. When dry lightly rub off and polish the glass with clean dusters. The window is thus cleaned easily and quickly.

Lights of New York

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Education is not a matter of school or college. Those merely are places where facilities for education are grouped and made more available. But all anyone needs for education is ambition and perserverance. It is hard to see how anyone can avoid a certain amount of education in these days. It was not so long ago that a dweller in a rural community had to depend mainly upon his imagination to tell him what foreign lands looked like or what good music might be. He never heard the voice of a really prominent foreigner, or even of the leading thinkers of his own country. Today, the movies bring him the atmosphere of foreign lands. He is as well acquainted with the appearance of the great buildings of the world as he is with that of his own barn. He knows how the people of distant countries look, move and act. On the radio, he hears the best music, the best orators, the best comedians, the keenest thinkers. Good roads and automobiles bring newspapers and magazines to his door, and enable him to travel in a few hours to places which it would have taken his grandfather days and weeks to reach. Man's viewpoint has widened to the extent that he is obliged to absorb general knowledge, whether he has any ambition to educate himself or not. And as for New York, the city is an education in itself.

At Daruma's, the Japanese restaurant on Sixth avenue, the waiter puts a gas ring on the table, places a sauce pan on the ring, and proceeds to cook your food in it. He then gives you a pair of chopsticks and leaves you to do the best you can. There is a trick in eating with chopsticks. You place one stick in the hollow between the thumb and first finger and press the tip of the third finger firmly against it. This holds it rigid. The other chopstick, held by the ball of the thumb and the first two fingers, is moveable. Once you master the technique, eating with chopsticks becomes fairly easy. But until you get good at it the safest thing is to tuck your napkin under your chin.

He has a sitting room, bed room, and bath on a court, and a misplaced sense of humor. One hot night he decided to retire early. As he entered his bedroom, in which no light was lit, he saw through the open window two girls across the court. Their window also was open; the light blazing. They were girls the man never had seen before and their conversation was plainly audible. Their idea was that it was too hot to stay in and that somewhere there must be a man who would take them to a night club. They telephoned a couple without success. Finally, one of the girls said: "Well, tell him as soon as he comes in to call Dorothy." And she gave her number.

* * *

This was enough for the listener. He went into his living room, where he has a telephone which doesn't go through any apartment switchboard, and he called that number. He got it. "Is this Dorothy?" he said. "Well, Dorothy, it sure is good to talk to you again. I suppose you heard the old man finally left me a million. Think of it! And you and I used to have so much fun on so little. But now we'll show them some speed, won't we, Dorothy. Don't be silly. Of course you know who this is. Do you mean to tell me after all the trouble I have had getting your number that you don't even remember my voice. I'd never forget your voice. Oh, well, what's the use?" And he hung up the receiver and went back into the bedroom.

"I tell you I don't know who it was," Dorothy was saying to her companion. "Naturally, I knew his voice, but I just couldn't quite place it. I can't think who could have been left a million. It's maddening."

"Never mind," said the second girl. "He is sure to call up again."

"Yeah?" said the man, as he pulled down his shade. But he said it to himself.

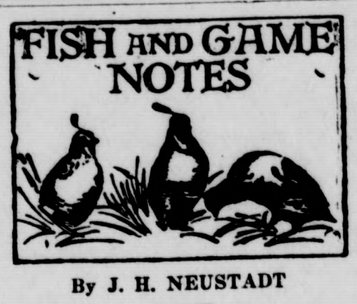
FISH AND GAME NOTES



By J. H. NEUSTADT

Pheasants feed on 100 species of insects as well as nearly 100 kinds of seeds and plants, a year's study by the department of entomology-zoology of the South Dakota State College shows.

In a report to the American Game Protective Association, Oscar H. Johnson, game and fish commissioner of that state, declares that the pheasant will eat almost anything digestible, which qualifies him for a wider range than any species of game bird.

The study referred to included examination of the crops of 285 specimens collected in all parts of the state at all times of the year. Plants and seeds found in crops included foxtail, wild buckwheat, ragweed, bindweed, smartweed, wild sunflower, wild rose, wolfberry, Russian thistle, wild oats, corn, wheat, oats and barley, as well as leaves and roots of numerous other plants.

Insects identified in the pheasant crops included cutworms, armyworms, many species of caterpillars, chinc bugs, tarnished plant bugs, buffalo tree hoppers, aphids, seed corn beetles, wire worm, white grubs, flies and their lrvae, ants and grasshoppers.

Of approximately 25 pheasants examined in a Pennsylvania study, it was found that only one bird had eaten corn. This particular bird's crop contained only five grains of corn as against 11 beetles that are known to ravage crops. Hundreds of beetles, including many Japanese beetles, and large quantities of weed seeds as compared to only oat kernels were found in the gizzards and crops of the pheasants studied.

While pheasants do eat some grain, it is usually waste grain picked up after the crops are harvested. During the summer, when insects are obtainable, the birds seem to prefer them to grain. The pheasant pays the farmer well for his keep.

Evidence that certain species of fish travel great distances from their breeding areas is shown by a Pacific salmon. After being marked with a metal tag by the United States Bureau of Fisheries in Alaskan waters, the salmon was caught 1,300 miles 44 days later in a Siberian stream, according to a report received by the American Game Protective Association.

For more than a decade the United States Bureau of Fisheries has been carrying on its marking experiments, using metal tags each of which bears a serial number. Marking experiments have shown that regardless of how much salmon may indulge the wanderlust, they always return to home waters for the spawning season.

Another way of marking is to remove certain fins in such a manner that no confusion with unmarked fish can result.

P. G. & E. WILL EXHIBIT LIFE-SIZE MODEL FARM

A life-size model farm, demonstrating the many uses in which electricity may be adapted in farm operation, is to be exhibited by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company at the forthcoming State Fair, September 5 to 12, inclusive.

Occupying a space of 75x125 feet near the southwest corner of the race track, the exhibit, which is to be known as "Electricity on the Farm," will consist of a farm home, dairy barn, milk house, chicken house, poultry brooder house, and feed house.

The farm home of the exhibit consists of the front and side elevations of a small house. In the rear, a stage has been constructed on which demonstrations of modern appliances are to be conducted. A shaded pergola will provide chairs and cool shelter for those who wish to see demonstrations of the electric range, electric water heater, refrigerator, dish washer, food mixing machine and other appliances used in the modern home.

The purpose of the exhibit, according to P. G. & E. officials, is to show how easily and economically electricity can be adapted to the farmer's dairying and poultry activities.

Equipment that will save him time and labor is to be shown in actual operation. A method of heating the soil about growing plants with electricity is expected to be one of the most interesting features of the exhibit.

Miss Helen Hicks won a cup by emerging victorious in the finals of the Eastern Womens' golf tournament at Roslyn, L. I.

MEASURES BENEFIT WORKERS OF STATE

The attention of the general public is called by the Labor Commissioner's office to eleven new labor measures passed by the last sesison of the Legislature and approved by Governor James Rolph, Jr., which became effective August 14. According to Arthur L. Johnson, attorney and deputy for the commission, who drafted the bills and assisted in getting them through the Legislature, these measures will be of tremendous benefit to the workers of the state and will help greatly in relieving suffering among workers who have been victims of the present industrial depression.

The new measures are listed and summarized as follows:

1. Senate Bill No. 26, Chapter No. 397, introduced by Senator J. M. Inman of Sacramento, which provides for the payment of the prevailing rate of wages on public works.

2. Senate Bill No. 83, Chapter No. 398, introduced by Senator Thomas Maloney of San Francisco, which prohibits the employment of aliens by contractors and subcontractors on public works and limits public employment exclusively to citizens.

3. Assembly Bill No. 450, Chapter 878, introduced by Assemblyman Ray Williamson of San Francisco, which permits wage claimants to sue individually for the thirty days' waiting time allowed as a penalty for non payment of wages on the due date.

4. Assembly Bill No. 451, Chapter 1047, introduced by Assemblyman Ray Williamson of San Francisco, which requires employers to pay undisputed wage claims without condition. This bill, it is estimated, will cut down materially the size of wage claims that have to be taken to court and will result in quicker adjustment of portions of wage claims about which there is no dispute, leaving but small amounts for court action.

5. Assembly Bill No. 675, Chapter 771, introduced by Assemblyman T. M. Wright of San Jose, which requires licensed contractors to report the name and address of the insurance carrier carrying workmen's compensation on their employees to the registrar of contractors and further requires the insurance carrier thereafter to report any cancellation or lapse of such policy.

6. Assembly Bill No. 1024, Chapter No. 820, introduced by Assemblyman B. J. Feigenbaum of San Francisco, which raises the preference allowed workers under assignments for the benefit of creditors from $100 to $200 for each worker for work done within 90 days instead of 60 days, and which extends the section to apply to receivership actions and all sorts of business failures. The amendment makes the section correspond more nearly to the bankruptcy practice in the Federal Court and doubles the $100 preference which was set in 1872, fifty-nine years ago.

7. Assembly Bill No. 1025, Chapter 821, introduced by Assemblyman B. J. Feigenbaum of San Francisco, which raises the preferred labor claims of workers in the case of death of the employer from $100 to $200 for work done within 90 days instead of 60 days and requires the administrator of executor of an estate to pay such preferred labor claims as soon as the money becomes available.

8. Assembly Bill No. 1026, Chapter 822, introduced by Assemblyman B. J. Feigenbaum of San Francisco, which raises the preference allowed workers under attachments and executions not founded on claims for labor from $100 to $200 for work done within 90 instead of 60 days and provides procedure for the enforcement of such claims.

9. Assembly Bill No. 1058, Chapter 1089, introduced by Assemblyman Ray Williamson of San Francisco, which provides that surviving heirs of wage claimants may collect wages due such deceased emplayees by affidavit and without procuring letters of administration or probating the estate where the total property left is less than $1,000.

10. Assembly Bill No. 1059, Chapter 824, introduced by Assemblyman Ray Williamson of San Francisco, which provides that the labor commissioner or his duly authorized deputy may institute suit for wages and incidental demands of persons financially unable to employ counsel in such cases as he may deem advisable.

11. Assembly Bill No. 1060, Chapter 1090, introduced by Assemblyman Ray Williamson of San Francisco, which prohibits private agreements which seek to set aside the wage law. This amendment will force all employers of labor in the state to pay wages regularly, regardless of any desire to force workers to wait for their wages by means of agreements which seek to circumvent the terms of the law requiring regular pay days.

Anglers, hunters and outdoor lovers can find speedy relief from poison ivy by applying spearmint plant. The leaves of the spearmint plant are known to almost all who go into the fields. When the ivy poisoning appears or even after the blisters have formed, the application of the juice by rubbing the parts with spearmint leaves will be found to relieve the condition at once, probably within a few hours.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

There are many world problems demanding solution, and the best brains are diligently seeking to find remedies for unemployment, to find a market for excess production of manufactured and agricultural products.

One of the bitterest pills to be swallowed by the United States goverment is the disposition of a huge amount of wheat, purchased by Uncle Sam with the laudable intention of assisting the wheat farmer. At the moment the farmers are demanding that this wheat be withdrawn from the market permanently—that it be sold to Germany at a price, and on long time credit, etc.

One of the big business men of the country, a highly successful self-made man of national standing and reputation, offered me the following idea, but refused to permit his name to be used:

"Our present business troubles are largely attributable to the fact that we are experts on production, but mighty weak on distribution.

"It seems to me that we have a splendid chance to relieve human suffering in China at this time, and by the same token teach the Chinese to like wheat bread, thus opening a new market which will some day be the greatest market in the world. We could afford to give China this wheat; it is now a menace to the farmers of our country.

"If the President, in his wisdom, should decided this is a good scheme, why not send five hundred soldiers, trained in our Army schools for bakers and cooks, to China with ovens such as are used in the field by the Army? These soldiers could soon teach the Chinese to make wheat bread and a demand for all our surplus wheat will soon be developed.

"Not one Chinaman in a thousand has ever tasted wheat in any form. Our cigarette manufacturers, when introducing a new brand of cigarettes, have a canny way of coming along and dropping a package on your desk for you to try. Didn't it work? Of course it did! And it will work in China with our wheat.

"Let's do something! Here is a constructive suggestion Mr. Farmer. Why not tell your Congressman or Senator if you like the plan?"

Ethel Bartlett, of Galax, Va., has been elected president of the student body at Virginia Teachers' College, Radford, Va.

TELEPHONE CALL HELPS TO SAVE CHILD'S LIFE

Three modern inventions, the telephone, mechanical surgery, and an airplane, saved the life recently of little four-year-old Edna Maud, of Williston, S. C., when a large necklace bead lodged in her bronchial tube. Two attempts made by the local surgeon failed to remove the object, and as the child's plight became serious, quick action was necessary. Accordingly, the local surgeon described the case by telephone to Dr. Chevalier Jackson, the renowned bronchoscopic specialist in Philadelphia, and an instrument adapted to just such cases was placed in an airplane and sped to its destination in South Carolina. The bead was removed and the little girl's life was saved.

Business has hit the lowest possible level so often lately that it seems to have become a fixed habit.

SUMMONS

24 PINTS OF PEACHES canned with 5½¢ worth of electricity... a cool, easy way to put up fruit

Fruits retain their natural color, shape, and flavor when canned with the electric range.

Then, too, there is no boiling or stewing over a hot stove. You simply prepare the fruit in the usual way, pack it in jars with syrup, screw the lids on lightly and place the jars in the oven of the electric range. The oven heat is automatically kept just right. At the end of an hour you remove the jars from the oven and screw the lids tightly.

By actual test, the cost for electricity for canning 24 pints of peaches was 5½c, at a 3½c K.W. hour rate, using 1½ K.W. hours. The cost of canning an equal amount of other fruits was about the same. Besides giving you cool, easy canning, the electric range cooks food perfectly. You spend minutes in the kitchen instead of hours, because of the automatic features.

Stop in at our office and see the new electric ranges. Then select the model you prefer. Special terms make it easy.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1931 NUMBER 6

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

"On what grounds does your dad object to me?"

"On any grounds within a mile of the house."

"Weather Bureau? How about a shower today?"

"Don't ask us. If you need one, take one."

Lump Coal for furnaces, hand picked.

Passenger (asking for the third time): "Have we reached No. 234 Prospect street yet?"

Conductor: "Yes, ma'am. Here you are. (Stops car.)

Passenger: "Oh, I didn't want to get out. I only wanted to show my little doggie where he was born."

"Arthur, dad is in the billiard room. This is the moment to ask his consent to our marriage."

"No, I'll wait until he is in the library."

"Why?"

"Then he will have a book in his hand instead of a billiard cue."

One: "Why is Mabel so angry? The papers gave a full account of her wedding."

The Other: "Yes, but they put in that Miss Blackwell was married to a well-known collector of antiques."

Do you need a Fix-it Man? Give us a ring and he will be at your service.

Doctor: "Have you any organic troubles?"

Patient: "No, Doc, I can't even carry a tune."

Very Old Father: "There is nothing worse than to be old and bent."

Very Young Son: "Yes, there is dad."

Very Old Father: "What?"

Very Young Son: "To be young and broke."

The saddest case of all is the man who thinks he is good at some other man's game.
